

American Chemical Journal, Vol. 3 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from American Chemical Journal, Vol. 3 Need for a Re-determination of the Atomic Weight of Aluminum. There is probably no one of the so-called chemical elements equally abundant in nature with aluminum, and occurring in as numerous compounds, with regard to the atomic weight of which our knowledge has long rested upon so slender a foundation of accurate experiment. The following brief statement includes, I believe, all the determinations of this constant which are on record. Former Determinations. 1. Experiments of Berzelius, 1812. - Berzelius precipitated a solution of alum by addition of ammonia, dissolved the precipitate in sulphuric acid to saturation, filtered, concentrated the filtrate by evaporation, and threw down aluminum sulphate by alcohol.
