

President Lincoln: An Address Delivered in Trinity Church, Covington, KY (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from President Lincoln: An Address Delivered in Trinity Church, Covington, Ky This republic has had during its existence many dark and melancholy days: There were the days of darkness in which your fathers planted it, days of poverty and of blood. There have been in the continuance of its life days of internal striving, difficulty and fear. There have been, once more, in the past four years days of great alarm, almost reaching despair; and days of such slaughter, that their very hours seemed to run with blood, and their moments to trickle tears.
